From the Dugout

With a few exceptions, it seems the "big" projects are getting fewer and the time frames are getting longer. I have come to appreciate the clients who have given a project forethought and adequate time. But I earned all my gray hair meeting tight deadlines and truly enjoy performing under pressure. So, if you need anything yesterday (or in a month), just let me know. 'til next time, Keith Vivid Marketing was kind enough to give Steve and me a tight deadline on 11 boards for Sports Illustrated. Yes!

Cheers from the Crowd!

"Keith brings expert execution to each and every assignment. He works in a variety of styles and media. He never misses a deadline and he's always willing to go the extra mile, even when there are last-minute changes." Richard Berry

World Series Who was the youngest player ever to play in a World Series?

Trivia: Last month's answer:
Fred Clarke of Pittsburg, October 16, 1909
